

CIVIL EMPLOYEES GET FREE AID

Will Treat Injured in Hospitals as Soldiers Are Cared For.

Uncle Sam has made elaborate plans to give free hospital attention to all civil employees injured in the discharge of their official duties. The thousands of Government clerks in the Capital City will be interested in a ruling issued yesterday from the United States Employees' Compensation Commission whereby the army of clerks at home is entitled to medical and surgical attention in the same way as the fighting forces abroad, when injured while sustained in the line of official duties.

Should the employee be disabled in a city such as Washington, where there is a United States hospital, treatment must be given at such institution. In places where there are no government hospitals, the employer of the injured party is authorized to have attention given by a local doctor, and the commission will settle the bill at "minimum rates prevailing in the locality."

Rule of Commission.
The important provisions of rules follow:
"In all cities with a dispensary in charge of a United States medical officer it is desirable to have such dispensary furnished with complete medical and surgical service as possible, and to promote this service the commission will pay the necessary care of injured employees who are able to return to the dispensary for treatment."
"In places where there are no United States medical officer, etc., the commission, in accordance with the terms of the compensation act of September 7, 1916, hereby approves the selection by the injured employee of reputable physicians licensed under State laws to practice medicine or surgery."
"If the condition of the patient is so serious as to require care in a private room, such care will be allowed upon the statement of the attending physician to that effect, but immediately upon recovery from said serious condition such patients should be transferred to the general ward."
